The House leadership is crippling Mississippi's job creation efforts. How can we create jobs here if Mississippi gets the reputation in the business world of not keeping our promises and being hostile to job creators in our own state?

Each minute we wait could cost Mississippi another job. Many of these job-creators are going to evaluate the future of their projects before next year. These industries made plans based on promises that are now being broken by the House leadership. They can't wait any longer. We have to act now.

These are "Job Bonds." They secure 3,500 jobs directly and create thousands of more jobs indirectly. These jobs will employ black and white Mississippians in virtually every region of the state. These are also high-paying jobs that Mississippi's economy desperately needs.

There is obviously a small group in the House who would rather make points than paychecks. If some people want to play politics they should wait until the Regular Session instead of jeopardizing Mississippi jobs during this critical Special Session.
